MARKET FACT #259

5.4%

annually is the average value increase of properties in the U.S.A.
On the other hand, S&P500 tends to have an average return rate of 10%.

DATE: February 23, 2024

COMMENT: This amount of return rate for both types of investments shows how american people may end up investing their money next. Despite rising prices of rents, properties are essentially LAND and land is a finite resource as there's only so much land on a nation for people to occupy. Resources that people need on a daily basis but have a limited supply on the planet is CATEGORY #1 when investing. Companies come and go, but things like water, land remain precious resources and a must-have to everyday lives or to endure any financial crisis.
